BITTER FACTIONAL FIGHT IS PRESAGED

By Controversy between President Wilson and Bryan over Military Program.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Little else is heard in official circles here except the controversy between President Wilson and William Jennings Bryan and what effect its outcome will have on next year's campaign.

Bryan's statement in reply to the president's Manhattan Club speech is everywhere accepted as the formal declaration which presages a bitter fight between Democratic factions—one led by the president favoring military preparedness and the other led by Bryan in opposition to any steps in the direction of "militarism."

It is the political result rather than the success or failure of the administration's military program in Congress that holds the center of the controversy. The result of the political result, it is universally held, is going to be disastrous to the party in power unless there occurs an intervention of the miracle kind. Nobody looks for anything like that to happen. Politicians don't believe in miracles.

They are recalling many little things which happened between the president-maker and human product of his political craftsmanship at Baltimore, when the former was apparently enjoying the fruits of his reward. Recollection goes back even further than that to about the time of that "cocked hat" episode, and it is being referred to as one of the ironical twists in this highly dramatic situation. But it is pointed out that when it comes to irony that incident has nothing on the impressive scene at the Bryan home here when the president called on Bryan the day following the latter's resignation from the premiership. That was dramatic, indeed. "God bless you," said Bryan, and Wilson returned the compliment in the same words.

Digging Up Things. These little happenings are being dug up now with more of a relish than the gravity of the present situation would seem to call for, and the enjoyment being extracted from these memories is not being participated in exclusively by Republicans. Being human beings with an American sense of humor, even Democratic politicians know a joke when they see one, even if it is at their own expense. It is not to be expected, however, that upon the occasion of the cracking of this particular joke any of them are verging on hysterics.

The consensus of opinion here is that, unless the administration commits some especially egregious blunder, its military program will go through. It may not go through, and probably will not, precisely as now arranged, but substantially so. And, it is predicted here now, that it will be approved by Congress with important assistance from the Republican party. This is predicted upon the assumption that the administration will be smart enough to keep the question out of politics and out of party caucuses to any such extent as to drive away Republican help on the grounds that the administration is trying to make campaign material out of a matter that, it is widely held, should rest entire-

VERY EXISTENCE OF UNION LABOR TESTED IN YEAR NOW ENDED

As Year Was Most Momentous in History of Labor and One of Unusual Stress.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 8.—Presentation of the annual report of the executive council featured the opening day of the thirty-fifth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor which opened here today for a two weeks' session. President Samuel Gompers presented the report which pronounced the year past the most momentous in the history of organized labor and one of extraordinary stress for the labor movement, testing as it had its very existence.

"There is not a country, and there is scarcely a relation in the common life," says the council's report, "that does not show some effect of the terrible war that is being waged in Europe. From our present viewpoint these effects are primarily destructive. Whatever of constructive value shall come out of it all, will depend upon the wisdom, the ability and the statesmanship of the real statesmen of the nations. But at present we see customs, institutions, and the relationship that are the result of years of struggle and persistent effort to realize ideals, swept away by the great tide of destruction and lost in the clash of arms, the ly on a patriotic foundation. Wants Republican Support. It is believed that the administration will do this. That it will be careful to bid for Republican support on patriotic grounds, and keep the whole matter as far away from partisan politics as it is able to do. For, as is well known, the Republican party has always stood for an adequate navy and ample appropriations for the army and coast defenses. On the other hand, a very considerable element of the dominant party has always been opposed to this policy. The nucleus of the peace-at-any-price men, as they have been more or less derisively referred to, has always been found within Democratic ranks, and whatever following Bryan will have in his fight against the president's preparedness program will be almost entirely a following composed of Democratic congressmen.

That is the present prevailing view as to the Wilson-Bryan fight on the issue per se. As to the political effect of the split between these two dominant and dominating Democrats, the opinion here is just about as general that the fight will become so bitter that any hope of restoring anything like a semblance of harmony in the party in power before next year's campaign is wholly out of the question. In other words, the way the politicians view it is that Bryan's fight against the president means the certain defeat of Wilson should he be the nominee. It is not much of a certainty that he could win next year with Bryan's support, but it is a dead sure certainty that he cannot win without it, they say.

This suggests another phase of the lively gossip going the rounds and that is that there is now more than a mere possibility of the president not being the nominee. Many are of the opinion that the probability is that he will not be under the circumstances that have developed in the last year, culminating with the unfavorable signs of last week's elections, and the warlike challenge of the man who made it possible for him to be president. It is the talk that President Wilson, who has never taken the public into his confidence as to how he regards the one-term plank in the Baltimore platform, which plank "pledged the candidate to that principle," may soon deem the time opportune to do so, and that when he does, he will declare that he considers himself honorably bound by that specific platform declaration.

Memorable Year Recalled. Of course, this is all speculation of the politicians of the capital, but speculation of politicians here has a habit of more frequently than otherwise developing into reality. One thing, however, is that they regard the break between Wilson and Bryan as the big potential political happening since Roosevelt booted his party at Chicago in 1912, and they prophesy with more assurance now what is going to happen to the party in power at this time than they predicted then what would happen to the party that was confronting the government in that memorable year.

The topic of the hour in Washington—overshadowing and dwarfing all others—is the latest, and most serious of all, Democratic party trouble started by Bryan's warlike challenge to, and defiance of, Woodrow Wilson.

smoke of the battlefield, and in the terrors of naval warfare."

Effects of War. Describing the effects of the war upon organized labor and American customs and institutions, the report deals at length with attempts by nations to interfere with the peaceful pursuit of American industries.

"Some of these movements," it says, "have been genuine, others have been created by individuals and interests that were really unscrupulous. These movements have taken various forms; some have tried to influence the policies of the state and governmental authorities of our country; others have tried to work upon public opinion and still others have sought to use the good name of our labor movement to further the interests of some foreign country."

"High tribute was paid the working men of the nation through whose patriotism, the report says, these plans have perished and the movements so far have been futile."

"The efforts to use the working men of our country have been of two kinds," the report continues, "none to get through them the endorsement of the foreign policy to place an embargo upon so-called munitions of war, the other has been to stir up industrial contentions and disputes and thus interfere with the actual process of production so that products to be sent abroad may be stopped. Foreign agencies have been trying to corruptly reach some of the organizations of the workers but they have not succeeded. There is nothing touching the industrial and commercial life of America that is not of interest to the warring nations."

Time for World Congress.

The holding of a world's labor congress at the same time and place that peace delegates meet when the war is ended, is recommended in the report as "necessary in order to infuse the spirit of humanity and democracy into this political conference." In order that the position of the United States working men in this regard may be fully representative of the country's unanimous voice of labor, the report recommends that all international unions be urged to give the plan their support.

The report covers the recent investigation by labor leaders of the Dick military law. In that connection it says:

"Up to the present we have received no complaint nor have we learned of any act in which the military arm of the government had misused the Dick law to offset or to curb the aspiration of the working people of the land. We refer particularly to the situation in Colorado last year. The corporations had practically coerced and intimidated the officials of the state and had over-ridden the laws of the state. There is not nearly so grave a danger in the Dick law as there is in the menace threatening our institutions through the private detective agencies and the private army of gunmen."

Attention is also called in the report to the work of the United States commission on industrial relations. Chairman Walsh and the labor representatives, Messrs. O'Connell, Linnon and Garretson, are praised for their "judgment and determination which brought to light many wrongs and injustices that might otherwise have been concealed or overlooked."

Wants Publicity. The commission's report is strongly endorsed by the executive council, which recommends that the convention urge the next Congress to make the report and hearings of the commission public documents. "Because the commission did not follow conventional lines and so presented facts and materials that are usually carefully suppressed and not available to the masses of the people," the report continues, "there was initiated against the commission a campaign for the purpose of discrediting in advance the final report. However, the labor movement as well as all citizens who have sympathy and understanding of the lives of the wage earners united in a determined effort to defeat this campaign and to make known their approval of the policy the commission followed."

In reviewing legislation by the last Congress, the report expresses the executive council's approval of the seamen's bill. The law, it says, will afford a large measure of safety provisions for the general public who travel the high seas and, the report adds, "we feel confident in asserting that the passage of this legislation by the sixty-third Congress, was one of its distinctions."

Statistical reports were read showing the average membership for the American Federation of Labor for the year was 1,946,347, a decrease of 74,324 members, the first decrease in total membership since 1908. While the average membership for the year shows a decrease of 74,324, the September membership is 1,994,111, a decrease of only 26,550. A steady growth in membership is predicted to follow the readjustment of conditions affected by the European war. Expenditures for the year 1915 were $303,955.95 and receipts $271,625.53 as compared with $265,737.21 and $268,166.97 in 1914.

WEST VIRGINIA TAKES PART IN CAPITAL NEWS

Events of Washington, D. C., Are Reported by Telegram's Correspondent There.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—"When I saw a fly do I send a soul into eternity?"

The scientist turned quickly on his questioner as if to question the latter's sanity. The man to whom the question was put was Prof. A. D. Hopkins, of the bureau of entomology a native of West Virginia, who was for many years of the faculty of the state university at Morgantown.

"Have insects brains and souls?" continued the interviewer. "Do I annihilate brains—gray matter—when I wallop a mosquito hard enough to end his corporal existence?"

"Why?" laconically asked the scientist, still puzzled as to why the questions were put.

"Prof. Henry G. Walters, of Langhorne, Pa., head of the plant research institute, says that 'insects have brains and souls'—that they are capable of fits of insanity, permanent insanity, and that there are low-brow, high-brow and no-brow members in the kingdom of bugdom," replied the interviewer, "and I'd like to know

AGED GRANDMOTHER

So Weak She Could Hardly Stand—Made Strong by Vinol.

Right here in Clarksburg we have seen such excellent results from Vinol that it is a pleasure to know it is doing so much good for old people in other parts of the country.

Woodbridge, N. J.—"My grandma was recovering from the grippe and was so weak she could hardly stand, and as she keeps house for my father and myself, she could not get around at all. She had taken cod liver oil and many other medicines, but nothing seemed to do her any good. At last we heard of Vinol and tried it, and grandma commenced to feel better right away, and got strong very soon, so she gets around as well as ever. We all praise Vinol for it is a splendid medicine." Myrtle H. Bunn.

The reason Vinol is so successful in restoring strength to the aged is because of the rare combination of tonic iron, the curative medicinal extracts of fresh cod's liver, beef peptone and mild native wine. It supplies iron to the blood, quickens the appetite, aids digestion, promotes proper assimilation of food, and enriches the blood, and brings back the strength of renewed health. What you think about it?

"Perhaps he's right," answered the government's expert on "bugology," "but it seems to me that all this comes from some nature—naturalists' attempt to ascribe human emotions and thoughts to every action of the bugs."

"Did you ever meditate on whether or not a human 'bug' had a mind? Some of them surely have imaginations. It is possible that a bug has one sort of mind, a 'bug' another, and a regular human being still another."

As to plants and flowers having minds and souls as you say Prof. Walters thinks—well, he's way beyond me," concluded Dr. Hopkins.

Only eighteen candidates, one of them from West Virginia, for the seven vacancies have reported for the examinations for commissions in the navy medical corps, which will take place at nine if the principal cities on November 15. For some reason the young men of the country are not taking as much interest in the medical profession as in former years. A decrease in the number of graduates from the medical colleges was reported last year, and the number of students at these institutions is smaller than it was a year ago.

By some it is insisted that the standard at the medical colleges has been raised to a point where the profession ceases to be a profitable employment. Before a candidate for the navy medical school is eligible, he must have graduated from one of the standard institutions. Both the army and navy medical corps are experiencing considerable difficulty in keeping up to their required strength.
